

Gloves in a Bottle

Travelling abroad today generally involves air travel – and in some instances of considerable duration.

The effects of the recent safety measures taken by the authorities, including the ban on larger bottles in hand luggage, is taking its toll on travellers.

The dehydrating effect of plane flight is well documented and spending hours in an arid airplane cabin can cause severe dry skin conditions. In-flight air is drier than any of the world's deserts. Relative humidity is 20-25% in the Sahara or Arabian deserts, while optimum comfort is around 50%. In-flight cabin humidity gradually falls and in many cases is little more than 1%.

Most travellers fight this by drinking water and frequent applications of moisturisers. One recent article offering suggestions for travellers, cites the unappealing option of using heavy, greasy creams and lotions. However, a 'Shielding Lotion' like Gloves In A Bottle with its light formula provides more comfortable protection from dry skin that will last throughout flights.

A 'Shielding Lotion' retains 40-50 percent of skins natural moisture and lasts for hours. People can use this dry skin treatment to stay moisturised even though they are exposed to the dehydrating atmosphere in the airplane cabin.

Gloves In A Bottle Does The Job

Gardening people like getting the hands in the soil without worrying about the state of their skin or having to deal with the hassle of gloves. 'Gloves in a Bottle' is the new product that solves both problems in the simplest and most effective way, and comes fully recommended from real hands-on people!

Not only does this product protect your skin; according to many happy customers, it seems to even have the secret to eternal youth harboured within the blue bottle that is becoming the latest necessity for gardening people. User's testimonials including words such as 'amazed', 'thrilled with the results' and 'miracle' are contributing to the success of 'Gloves in a Bottle' - with everyone that uses it eager to let the rest of the gardening and DIY world know about this wonderful new product.

'Gloves in a Bottle' works by preventing naturally occurring moisture from leaving the outer layer of skin, whilst moisturising the skin itself. It is applied like a hand cream, leaving hands feeling smooth and soft and providing an invisible barrier - a 'Shielding Lotion', protecting the skin from dirt and chemicals we all come into contact with every day. 'Gloves in a Bottle' also offers protection against grease and grime, thus making it easier to wash away when the job is done.

So, if you want to spend more time on the job and less time looking for a treatment for any dry skin condition, give 'Gloves in a Bottle' 'Shielding Lotion' a try.

Prices from £4.99 for 60ml, which lasts over a month. Ask your local garden centre or chemist.
